FASHION DESIGN

Designers are multidisciplinary figures who merge artistic and technological skills and who are capable of conceiving and implementing innovative projects for the design, production and communication of various product categories. They can work in the fields of design and product development, fashion retailing and advertising, management and strategic planning, communication and documentation. Students can develop their own projects, with the support of professionals who share the Iuav experience of the “fashion system” so famous worldwide.

The multidisciplinary approach of the course focuses on the study of the analysis and management of the environment, climate changes, alternative energy sources, urban quality with its architectural and social importance as common goods, changes through a vision of Urban planning and the maintenance of cultural heritage. Students can engage in both study and practice, in the workshops and in the institutions that make possible an exchange of different experiences.
