

NON- STANDARD!

two collective housing projects

lecture by Sophie Delhay

Housing architecture is a major challenge for the city and society of tomorrow. Currently subjected to a multitude of standards and preconceived ideas, it no longer meets the social and spatial ambitions to which we aspire. To free ourselves from these constraints, we need to find creative crossroads. The lecture will address both the freedom we offer residents and the freedom we take as architects.

Sophie Delhay is a French architect and educator. She runs her own office in Paris and teaches at EPFL Lausanne (CH) and ENSA-Versailles (FR).
