Through the practice of drawing, visual artist Carolina Raquel Antich introduces students to the project Woolshed: A New Era for Alpine Wool, which aims to revitalize the Alpine wool industry through collaborative processes and innovative, sustainable practices. During the workshop, students produce a series of illustrations for the Alpine Wool Atlas, a publication that accompanies and defines the scope of the project.

Born in Rosario, Argentina, Carolina Raquel Antich lives and works in Venice. She collaborates with numerous international galleries, museums, and foundations. Her paintings have been chosen by the publisher Feltrinelli to illustrate the covers of books by Japanese writer Banana Yoshimoto.
