Louise Chennevière writes about Britney Spears and the little girl of the year 2000 she once was; Arthur Dreyfus traces his digital love life, returning to the violence he experienced with his father as a teenager. Through female icons, intimate memories and online encounters, both authors seek to unravel adolescence: its desires, its wounds, and what continues to live through us.

In conversation with Julia Marchand, who curates the evening in collaboration with Nita Spazio.

The event is part of the "Narratives of Desire - Mythologies of Distance" exhibition curated by Andreja Drobnjak, Elisaveta Vasileva and Ali Mezher
